Television's Fall Feast

It's September, and that means it's time to ring in another new season of television. Why does the television season begin in September? This harkens back to the days of radio, when new radio shows would begin their runs in September, continue through the winter into the spring, and then take the summer off when most people spend time outside away from their radios and televisions. September is also an important time for television networks because the Nielsen Company begins its measurement of television audiences and ratings. The better the ratings for a television show, the easier it is for a network to sell advertising. So, September marks a frantic time for television makers, raters, and advertisers, not to mention fans awaiting the return of their favorite shows like NBC's This Is Us and the premieres of new ones such as CBS's Young Sheldon, a spin-off of the wildly successful comedy hit The Big Bang Theory.

Great classics like Cheers, *M*A*S*H*, All in the Family, The West Wing, and Seinfeld adhered strictly to the September schedule. However, cable now competes with network TV for dominance. Cable channels HBO, Showtime, and Starz all draw Hollywood talent for their small-screen gems, such as The Young Pope, American Gods, and Game of Thrones. And cable shows do not have to air in September. They can premiere new shows whenever they want.

Even more disruptive of television is streaming video. Netflix, Hulu, and Amazon Prime all offer shows that can be accessed only by paying for their particular service. The advantage is that you no longer have to pay for cable to watch popular shows like House of Cards, The Handmaid's Tale, and Mr. Robot. Viewers can watch them whenever they like directly from a computer, smartphone, or Internet-connected television. September may offer a bonanza of new network television, but there are countless ways to watch new shows all year long.

Appleseed Fact and Fiction

On September 26, 1774, John Chapman was born, yet the world would come to know him as Johnny Appleseed and memorialize his life work in fantastic tales. For this reason, September 26 is Johnny Appleseed Day.

Unlike the fictional tall-tale characters Paul Bunyan and John Henry, Johnny Appleseed was a real man. His passion for apple trees began in his teenage years, when he got a job working in an apple orchard. While the popular image of Johnny Appleseed is that of a man wandering the continent spreading handfuls of apple seeds, Johnny Appleseed was far more deliberate in his plantings. The law of the frontier granted land rights to anyone who developed a homestead, and a nursery of 50 trees fit that definition. In this way, Johnny would raise his nursery and then sell the land to settlers. In this manner, Johnny Appleseed came to own over 1,200 acres over 100,000 square miles of frontier wilderness.

Furthermore, Johnny's apples weren't for eating. He planted the small, tart varieties of apples known as "spitters," because that's what you did when you tasted them. These were the perfect apples for making hard cider, which in Revolutionary America was a far more valuable commodity than edible apples. Water was considered unsafe for drinking due to harmful bacteria, whereas fermented, alcoholic cider was far safer. Sadly, during the Prohibition Era of the 1920s, many of Johnny Appleseed's original nurseries were axed, and the American tradition of cider making was decimated.

Despite the government's best efforts during Prohibition, the legacy of Johnny Appleseed lives on. The image of Johnny, barefoot and wearing threadbare clothes, is not fiction but fact. As a member of the New Church, he preached that nature and God were intertwined. As such, he lived a spare, nomadic life, loved animals, and was a vegetarian. But that tin pot on his head? It most likely sprang from the rumor that he wore a tin cloth hat that he used as a dinner plate.

September Birthdays

In astrology, those born from September 1–22 are Virgos. Detail-oriented Virgos have a deep sense of humanity, a trait that makes them careful, tender, and practical. Since all that attention to detail is put into the service of others, Virgos make perfect humanitarians. Those born between September 23–30 balance the scales of Libra. Libra epitomizes fairness and harmony in all dealings large and small. Sincere, beautiful, and romantic, Libra will work hard to keep all relationships on an even keel with boundless grace and charm.

From the Activity Directors Desk

We can officially say summer is over with the first day of fall being September 22nd. We are planning on taking an outing to look at the changing leaves at the end of September or the beginning of October.

This year for Grandparents Day we are doing a cookie decorating event on September 9th from 2PM to 3PM. We are inviting the grandchildren and great-grandchildren of the residents to come in and decorate cookies with their loved one. Please make a reservation with Kassie to make sure we have enough supplies for the event.

Any questions or suggestions please contact Kassie at 920-412-6224 or email at kassie@angelstouchcbrf.com
